Tofu to go

LOW IN calories, high in protein and cholesterol-free, tofu is a mainstay of Asian diets undergoing discovery by Western palates. Carmel Valley houses the only tofu factory in Monterey County. The Jack and Beanstalk factory, run by Buck and Leslie Patton, is profiled on page 25. Here Leslie Patton removes fresh tofu cakes from a chilling bath prior to packaging. Sizing decision put off

Public vote on dam delayed up to two months

By NANCY HILLS

MONTEREY PENINSULA Water Management District has become quite familiar with the proverbial fate of "best laid plans of mice and men."

The water board had planned on sizing the proposed dam on the Carmel River for its environmenal impact report on Dec. 19 during a special continued board meeting and workshop, but found the computer model it needed to accomplish that task was not ready. A decision on the dam size was rescheduled for February 1986, which changes the time schedule for the completion of the EIR and a vote on the dam by two months.

The vote was originally scheduled for spring of 1987 and now has been rescheduled to the fall of that year.

The board also discussed, but continued, an admendment to phase additional dam water allocations, decided to file a water rights application, reassess staff priorities and added a cumulative impact section to the EIR.

Rescheduling the vote may have some advantages, according to Bruce Buel, general manager of the water district. If the vote takes place in November 1987, it could coincide with the November vote for three water district director positions that will be up that year.

If the two elections are done on the same ballot, it could save the taxpayers about $30,000, Buel explained. The vote on the dam was planned as a seperate mail-in ballot in spring of 1987, which would be an additional cost to the district.

The water board also felt that it needed to wait until Technical Advisory Committee (TAC) representitives of planning departments from the water district jurisdiction, and the Policy Advisory Committee (PAC) representatives had presented the board with recommendations. Both committees met Dec. 16, but decided that they did not want to make any recommendations until there was more information from the computer model.

Darby Fuerst, project manager for the district and the computer model, explained before the meeting that the model was not ready because "we found the modeling more difficult than we first imagined." Fuerst has been working with the model for the past year along with consultant Yorim Litwin. Litwin has been reviewing Fuerst's work.

The computer program, Fuerst said, is basically a water accounting model that will provide the flow data for different sizes of the proposed dam.

As an important fact in the dam size, the board discussed "drought vulnerability," or acceptable shortfall.

The water board previously designated that the dam size must provide enough storage so there would be no more than a 40 percent "shortfall" in case of a drought.

That means the water district should be able to supply at least 60 percent of the water demand, whatever amount that demand might be, if a drought strikes. In the 1976 and 1977 drought, the California-American Water Co. was able to provide 54 percent of the demand or when the supply was 46 percent short of the normal water demand.

The largest dam the board is considering at this time is 29,000 ac. ft. of storage; the smallest 20,000 ac. ft. Each would provide a different shortfall.

The maximum percentage of shortfall that the water board will allow is important to the dam size. The less shortfall, the bigger the dam and the greater the price of the dam.

"It is a matter of what the risk the community is willing to take," Pat Bernardi, chairwoman of the water district board, said after the meeting.

The 40 percent shortfall, Bernardi said, is for a 'worst-case scenerio" and might not even happen.

"How often do we have a drought like 1976 and 1977?" she said.

The board voted to continue review of

Parting with reality

Dear Editor:

The negative comments made by some of our citizens regarding the city council's plan to purchase the Mission Ranch are a classic example of the old adage, "they know not what they say." Nobody in public life resents criticism, it goes with the job, but when it parts with reality and fact that very criticism loses its impact and credibility. It is then we find that there are people besides Santa Claus who go around in the dark.

The State Planning Act, Section 65402 (a) reads as follows: "If a general plan or part thereof has been adopted, no real property shall be acquired, until the location, purpose and extent of such acquisition have been submitted to and reported upon by the planning agency as to conformity with said adopted general plan or part thereof."

The council (of course) was aware of the above, perhaps those negative voices wouldn't have been quite so loud had they had the same awareness.

In conclusion, a quote from Winston Churchill that fits this situation so exactly, "Nothing in life is so exhilarating as to be shot at with no result."

Save Mission Ranch

Dear Editor:

I have been a resident of Carmel for 68 years. In that time I have seen the various Carmel city councils make some strange decisions. However, if they can save the Mission Ranch from being town down and overbuilt with condominiums, whatever way they do it, is a good decision.

I know it would make my family happy. It happens that my grandfather John Martin founded and built the ranch and my mother was born there in 1884.

A world of peace

Dear Editor:

I wish more people had known about an important community event before it occurred.

On Saturday, Dec. 14, a monumental history-making event occurred as new technology allowed the Beyond War Organization to present its award for 1985. Via multiple satellite link-ups the Five Continent Peace Initiative received recognition for their peace efforts by a complicated seven-nation live spacebridge.

The leaders of Mexico, Argentina, Sweden, Greece, Tanzania and India were honored for their efforts to end the threat of war. They are actively working toward a world of true peace and economic development, not the extremely volatile "peace" maintained by threat of a final holocaust that modern technology and greed have created.

Winston Boone presented the 1984 award to one of the recipients, Yergeny Chazov, at a ceremony in which a live spacebridge linked Moscow and San Francisco. Saturday, Boone told the audience at the Monterey Conference Center's downlink he had wondered what could possibly be an "encore" for that incredible technological feat in 1985. Last September the technology for this exceptional event had not even been tried. Yet this organization (with only two salaried members) decided to undertake the goal. In less than four months, and an immense coordinated organizational effort, their goal became reality.

If people can thus accomplish this much to make an urgent need known, it is clearly evident that a massive global response to our right to be free from the threat of war will be heard and acted upon.

Please — think globally and act locally now. Become informed. We don't have unlimited time.

In good company

Dear Editor:

When I saw the item in your paper about the possibility of the council getting the Department of Fish and Game to help with the cost of restrooms, I though it was pretty funny. On second thought it made a good deal of sense: The commercial interests can haul in the tourists and the residents can shoot them down.

This item reminded me of a letter that was in the Boston Globe when I was in the east last spring. The gist of it was that the writer and his New York friends liked Boston and thought it had all that appeals to tourists; but where were the public toilets?

This puts Carmel in a category with Boston and the World Trade Center in New York. Pretty classy, Carmel!

The high price of dying

Dear Editor:

It's my humble opinion that funeral services are much too expensive for the average family, but we eventually have to discuss this delicate subject with our families.

The other night I spoke to my wife. "Now, I have something to say that just may upset you. Suppose a beer truck ran over me and, you know, I didn't recover. We must discuss funeral details. I know how upset you will be and I..."

She smiled, "I've taken care of it."

"Already?"

"A long time ago. I have a list here of attractive options."

Everything she mentioned cost a fortune. "And it's cash up front," she said.

"Come on, you know my credit's always been good."

"Yeah," she said, "but you won't be around to pay it off."

"Good point, I forgot about that."

"How much did you figure on paying?"

"Oh, about 50 bucks — 60 tops. What can I get for that?"

She looked it up. "Here is something nicely in your price range. A guy comes over, stands in front of our house, cries a little and waves goodbye to you."

"Oh, isn't that nice. How much does it cost?"

"$54.87 with tax."

"Oh, I don't know. I think I just won't go until these prices come down."

Yessir, you can lighten the load considerably if you can laugh at yourself.

Improving language

Dear Editor:

For people wishing they had something interesting to occupy a few hours a week, the Carmel Adult School offers Spanish instruction every Tuesday at the Carmel Foundation, open to all. There are three levels of proficiency: beginning at 9 a.m., intermediate at 1 p.m. and conversational at 3 p.m. The fee is a modest $20 for seven two-hour sessions.

Of equal importance with the lessons themselves is the camaraderie of the classes under the tutelage of Maria Rosa Mencia, an inspired teacher, who is patient with the slow and stimulates the more advanced. Normal attrition has made space available in all three groups for the next term, which starts Jan. 7. Anyone wishing to join need merely show up at the class of his or her choice.

What better New Year's resolution than to learn something new or improve a rusty skill in the language of so many countries to the south of us? We who are in the program will welcome you. Further information is available by calling the Carmel Foundation.

A wonderful person

Dear Editor:

We would like to thank the City of Carmel and Mr. Steve Taylor for coordinating and supporting and after school program at River School. Our son attends every day and receives excellent care and supervision. We are very fortunate to live in an area that has such a wonderful program. We hope that this becomes a permanent year-round offering.

A friend first

CHRISTMAS IS over now, but the holiday partying still goes on, climaxing with the party of parties that finishes off every every: New Year's Eve.

As the year winds down there are seven words in particular you should remember: "Be first a friend, then a host."

You've probably heard it all before, especially at this time of the year, but I'm going to tell you anyway. Drinking drivers are responsible for about half the people killed in California traffic accidents. In California 2,607 people were killed in alcohol-related accidents in 1984 out of a total of 4,999 deaths.

So if you're hosting a holiday party here are a few (of the many) tips to remember.

Quick cures such as drinking coffee or taking a cold shower makes a drunk person wide awake, but still drunk.

Carbonated mixers speed up the rate that alcohol is absorbed into the body, so it's wise to use fruit juice or tea for alcohol-content punch.

Have plenty of snack available because food helps slow the body's absorption of alcohol.

Suggest designated drivers who agree to stay sober or form car pools. If a friend insists on going home (ask them to stay the night first) call them a cab, drive them home yourself, or contact the various organizations that offer free transportation to party-goers.

Those are only a few of the many tips on making the holidays not only fun, but safe. Whatever happens, be a friend first, then a host. Your friends will thank you for it.

Happy (and safe) holidays from everyone here at the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook and Monterey Peninsula Review and we'll see you next year!

Correction

A line in last week's (Dec. 19) 20 Percent Opinion column by Carmel City Councilwoman Helen Arnold was inadvertently left out.

The sentence should have read: "At the San Carlos Street level could be a large park-like setting with the well-placed library, and a small parking area, tucked at the southeast corner for library staff and the handicapped."

We regret any confusion or inconvenience this omission may have caused.

The saga continues for Harrison library annex

By MICHAEL GARDNER

ANOTHER BLOW to the seemingly endless attempts to build a Harrison Memorial Library annex was delivered by the Carmel Planning Commission last week.

Commissioners on a unanimous vote determined that they have "serious questions" whether the annex and its accompanying underground parking garage conforms to the goals and policies of the city's general plan.

The determination of non-conformance would block development of the annex unless the council on Jan. 14 chooses to overturn the planning commission decision.

The council by a 4-1 majority — with member Robert Stephenson dissenting — has endorsed a plan to build a 4,500 sq. ft., $750,000 annex and an approximately $600,000 20-24 space parking garage and public restrooms on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

After tentatively approving the annex/-parking garage the council remanded the project to the planning commission for review of its conformance with the general plan before further work continued.

Under state law the planning commission must review whether a public project such as the annex is in conformance with the general plan. The council retains the right to overturn the commission, however,

The proposed annex is about 3,500 sq. ft. less than the size listed in the 1983 general plan provisions concerning the facility. The smaller annex was chosen because the library endowment fund of about $1 million is not enough to pay for construction and ongoing maintenance costs of an 8,500 sq. ft. facility.

The planning commission decision is based on arguments made by Commissioner Gene Hammond in a letter he presented Nov. 20.

Hammond admits he would prefer that the city not build an annex on the corner lots.

"Separately, apart from the politics, I'm satisfied with the way the library is now," Hammond told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook after the meeting.

Hammond favors a new library on the north field of Sunset Center, but like most city officials he believes that the citizens will never allow the city to move the library out of the present Maybeck-designed building.

Hammond opposes the corner location because he believes an annex will add to downtown traffic problems.

'I DON'T want to see anything that would generate more traffic," he said.

Hammond pointed out that the city council plans to spend about $350,000 of the "in-lieu" fee funds to partially pay for the parking garage. The in-lieu budget is generated by city fee charges to developers who cannot meet the parking requirements.

But by spending in-lieu funds for the parking garage, the city must open the facility to everyone rather than restricting parking for staff and patron use.

Thus, Hammond identified the parking garage as a public facility. Public parking garages are considered commercial uses.

And, the general plan specifically states that the city shall not expand commercial uses into the residential zone, Hammond argued.

The council could get around that provision by rezoning three lots elsewhere in the commercial district. Such a rezoning would balance out the addition of the three lots for the parking garage so there would be no increase in the commercial zone, Hammond explained.

"The council could even change the general plan if they feel that strongly about it," Hammond said.

Hammond agreed that the general plan specifically includes provisions for an 8,500 sq. ft. annex, but "other factors outweigh that" point.

In addition to the parking issue, Hammond's memo also argues that the project is not in conformance with the general plan because it adds a public use facilities in the residential zone and it would generate additional traffic since more than half of the library patrons reside outside the city limits.

Planning commissioners in just about 15 minutes of discussion agreed with Hammond during their Dec. 18 session.

Planning Director Diane White told commissioners that their "standard for review" of the conformance question should be whether the project meets three criteria:

- "The proposal furthers policies in the general plan.
- "The proposal is in general agreement and harmony with the general plan.
- "The proposal does not inhibit or obstruct the attainment of policies in the general plan."

Commissioner Marjorie Montelius said that the small annex could not "further policies in the general plan" since it is not nearly the size (8,500 sq. ft.) of the project specifically listed in the general plan.

Commission Chairman Gene Cava agreed, saying that the small annex "may ease the pain a little bit" but that "we're not supplying the facility we should."

And Sandy Swain summed up: "The library issue has been with us for 15 years. I think the library is going to be an issue for the next 15 years."

HARRISON MEMORIAL Library celebrated its annual Christmas party for patrons Dec. 19 with homemade cookies, fruitcake, brownies and fudge along with tea and coffee. A decision by the planning commission made a day earlier that the proposed library annex is not in conformance with the general plan failed to dampen spirits. Above, librarian Marcia Reade hands coffee to library board President Jack Billwiller and his wife, "Prim." (Michael Gardner photo.)

Restrooms and parking key beach issues

IN OTHER action Dec. 18, commissioners received their first look at the proposed walkway and landscaping plan for Carmel Beach.

Consultant Robert Royston also presented commissioners with an overview of the draft environmental impact report (EIR) for the approximately $1 million project.

Appointed to planning commission

Ken White moves up ladder in city politics

By MICHAEL GARDNER

KEN WHITE is moving up in city politics.

Already suggested as a possible Carmel City Council candidate in the April election, White has just been appointed to the planning commission and will assume that position at the first meeting in January.

If White's name sounds familiar, it should.

A 27-year resident of Carmel, White served on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education for four years. After serving as president of the board for three of the four years, White chose not to seek re-election in an announcement made in August of 1983.

White's decision not to run for re-election to the school board did not spell the end of his political career.

As a matter of fact it seems to be just the beginning for the 51-year-old Monterey High School athletic director and physical education teacher.

White, who is in his second year as president of the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), took the leap into city politics with his appointment to the forestry commission in May of 1984.

And there is talk around town of White running for a council seat in the April elections. David Maradei made the jump from forestry commission to council in 1982. Maradei's term expires in April as do the terms of Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilman Robert Stephenson.

A council seat is a possibility White still does not rule out.

Asked about an April candidacy, White remained non-committal: "I'm just going to do the best job I can on the planning commission and will spend a lot of time on that."

In an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook, White explained why he wants to be a planning commissioner and where he stands on some of the more controversial issues in town.

White views his work as a forestry commissioner as important, but that most of the responsibilities are "pretty standard" and the "guidelines are pretty clear."

The planning commission, however, will give him an opportunity to make more of an "impact on Carmel," White said.

"I'm very concerned about the direction the city is going, so I felt I would have a little more impact on the planning commission," he said.

KEN WHITE, a former president of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education and ex-city forestry commissioner, has been appointed to the Carmel Planning Commission. (Michael Gardner photo.)

WHITE, although disdaining political labels, does meet the council criteria of a "resident-oriented" commissioner.

"The preamble that's hanging over at city hall is exactly where I'm at," said White in reference to the 1929 ordinance that states business shall be subservient to residential concerns.

White is worried that the preamble is being reversed with the interests of the residents becoming subservient to business.

"Carmel is overcrowded and overbuilt. Any studies of the issues will show that," White said. "I think the time is soon coming where we may look up some day and find that the residents are in the minority."

White would like to see the day where the city and business can work out mutual concerns without the constant bickering that is prelevant today.

"I would really like to find out why there is this split between the city and business. It bothers me that we're looked at as two separate camps," he said. "I think we're going to have to learn to work together."

Although committed to residential interests, White promises that as a planning commissioner he will be "fair" to business applications.

"What I'm concerned about is that the policies are fairly enforced. Two things I'm good at are listening and studying. I want to find out more about these problems."

White does not have any set agenda for policies he would like to see changed or adopted.

"You have to ask me that in six months," he said.

But White does have an opinion on most key issues in town, such as the possible purchase of Mission Ranch Resort, Flanders Mansion, the library and last summer's ice cream cone controversy.

On parking, White said: "I walk a lot in town. I walk and jog on Scenic (Road) five days a week. I'll tell you one thing — we have a terrible parking problem. I don't know what the planning commission can do about it, but I intend to find out."

White supports city attempts to buy Mission Ranch Resort, a motel, restaurant and tennis club complex on about 20 acres just outside the city limits southwest of Carmel Mission.

"I think they ought to buy it. We need to look down the road 20 years. That's a piece of property that should be open space. There's an awful lot of potential there for benefit to the citizens," he said.

WHITE AGREES with a city proposal to lease the restaurant and motel as a concession, but only until the cost of the purchase can be recouped.

And White does not think the city should buy the property at the price Mission Ranch Corp. wants — an estimated $6.5 million.

"I don't want to sell the city to buy Mission Ranch. It's going to have to be a fair price," he said.

But White does want the city to sell another holding — Flanders Mansion inside Mission Trail Park.

"Sell the house and keep the property as open space" is White's plan.

A proposed annex to Harrison Memorial Library is another controversial issue White probably will address while on the planning commission. Commissioners just last week ruled that the proposed annex and its accompanying underground parking garage are not in conformance with the general plan. (See related story, this issue.)

White favors the original plan to build an 8,500 sq. ft. building rather than the current proposal for a 4,500 sq. ft. annex.

"We have to look down the road for my children and other people's children. We can't build a monument to a mistake," he said.

Pending before the planning commission is the draft environmental impact report for the beach walkway — a plan White supports.

Sizing of proposed dam delayed by water board drought vulnerability and dam sizing until February.

To help insure the computer model would be ready, the staff board rearranged some staff duties. A staff report stated one of the reasons that the model was not ready was because Fuerst juggled his time between working on the computer and other projects. To facilitate the completion of the model, the board voted to allow Fuerst to concentrate on the computer model full-time and re-set staff priorities to work on projects Fuerst would leave.

A RELATED item to the vote on the dam, a decision on incremental release, was also continued during the meeting, but it still stirred up a great deal of interest for the board and audience.

The board must decide if it wants to add incremental release as an admendment to the dam ballot measure. The admendment would phase allocations of the additional water the new dam would provide to jurisdictions within the water district over a period of time rather than allocate it in a lump sum.

By phasing the allocations, some of the jurisdictions felt that it would interrupt the implementation of their land use plans. The water supply would dictate what and when projects planned within the cities and county could be started or, in some cases, even if they could be done at all.

Water district director and Monterey County Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman said that she felt that "you can't ask people to pay for a particular work project and to vote on something they can't use." She said she would rather the cities and county phase land use planning than the water district phasing the water.

Director Heuer said that he was concerned that if the allocations were not phased, the additional water would be used up immediately rather than last until the year 2020 as planned.

"We've seen that happening now," Heuer said in reference to the way the current allocations have reached 90 percent usage in most of the jurisdictions.

Though he was supported in concept the phasing of water, Director Nick Lombardo said that business cycles create demand at different times, so private enterprise should be a factor in making a decision.

Director John Williams retorted that it is a question of "whether most people want to view the demand from a business point of view."

"We don't need to make a decision that the jurisdictions will fight tooth and toenail," Bernardi had observed earlier, and that the basis of the problem was whether people "are voting for additonal water (to use) or for drought protection."

The board continued a decision until its February meeting and acknowledged that the jurisdictions would like more input and time to study the admendment

THE BOARD approved an additional section to the EIR that would study the cumulative impact the dam would have on the quality of life in the area. John Davis, district consultant preparing the EIR, said that previously he did not have to look at the growth-accomodating aspects of the dam because that was already planned by the cities and county.

The report, Bernardi said, is something that other agencies, particularly the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), should do.

"We are having to do a lot of original research," water district counsel David Laredo pointed out.

Janet Brennan, a regional planner for AMBAG, told the board that there were a number of regional studies that the board could use and that she would be happy to meet with district to share information.

The board also agreed to file immediately for its water rights with the State Water Resources Control Board in order to get on an already-busy resources board 1986 schedule.

RECENTLY-ELECTED water board directors Billy DeBerry and Nick Lombardo confer about complex water issues. A staunch supporter of the proposed San Clemente dam during his campaign, Lombardo will have the opportunity with the rest of the board to vote on the size of the dam next year. (Nancy Hills photo.)

Library annex hits snag; may not fit general plan

speak mostly voiced concern about the absence of public restrooms and the loss of parking spaces along Scenic Road.

According to the draft EIR, currently there are 123 parking spaces. When the walkway is completed there will be just 69, or a loss of 54 spaces.

Royston told commissioners that the task force had discussed a possible site for a restroom at the foot of 13th Avenue.

Later in the hearing Jean Grace, a member of the beach task force, said the restroom proposal was eliminated from the walkway plan because of the cost and politics involved.

"We didn't want to see it stop this project. We didn't want it hung up by the problem...We did agonize over this," Grace said.

Robert Coffin of Carmel pointed out that the loss of parking spaces along Scenic Road will force beachgoers to park on the streets to the east: San Antonio, Carmelo, Camino Real and perhaps as far up the hill as Monte Verde.

Coffin suggested that the EIR be expanded to include information on traffic impacts to those streets if a project is developed.

He especially is concerned about additional traffic on Carmelo Street between Eighth and 13th avenues.

"People charge up and down that street at 45 mph. That street needs stop signs. Northbound traffic on San Antonio is absolutely outrageous," Coffin said.

Coffin also questioned why the concept of a public restroom "was just thrown out the window" when the project will cost "$250" per Carmel resident. "We need a minimum of two permanent restrooms."

Coffin recommended that the city rent portable toilets during busy times.

COFFIN ALSO wants to see more trash cans on the beach.

"People are just too lazy to carry their trash back up," he said.

And Coffin suggested that public telephones are needed especially since there is the possibility of an emergency on the beach.

Bernard Anderson of Carmel, who also is on the library board, agreed with Coffin's assessment of the restroom problem.

"I think it's time that should go into the picture," Anderson.

Peggy Arnold of Carmel said, "the front of my house is often a public toilet."

Arnold added that Scenic Road needs more police patrols to eliminate troublemakers.

"If you spend a million dollars and don't get control of what goes on down there then you might as well throw the whole thing out," she said.

The walkway plan will provide a five- to 10-ft. wide path from Eighth Avenue to the south city limits near Martin Way. There will be benches scattered throughout the pathway and access stairways to the beach added or repaired.

The design is posted at the post office. Copies of the draft EIR are available for public review at the library and at city hall. The review period closes at the end of January.

$1.3 million, 15-unit project

Demolition to clear way for senior housing

DEMOLITION OF several homes along Dolores Street will begin the first week of January to make way for a $1.3 million two-story, 15-unit senior citizens housing project.

Randazzo Enterprises is to demolish the homes remaining on the southernmost five lots on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues. The city will pay Randazzo Enterprises $5,675 for the work.

The senior citizen housing project is being jointly developed by the city and Monterey County Housing Authority.

Under the agreement, the city provides the property while the housing authority will build the apartments and operate the facility.

The housing authority is expected to award the bid for construction of the project in mid-February with a spring groundbreaking scheduled.

Architect Gene Takigawa estimates the construction costs at $40,000 per unit, or a total of $600,000. The city paid about $700,000 to acquire the lots.

Under terms of the agreement, Carmel low-income senior citizens will receive first priority for the approximately 600 sq. ft. one-bedroom, one-bath units.

The design includes nearly 10,000 sq. ft. of open space with each apartment having its own private garden patio area.

Nine parking spaces will be provided.

JANUARY

Carmel city staff relocated to Sunset Center bungalows and two rooms in the center for what should be approximately six months while city hall is remodeled. The project was approved by the council for $350,000.

The California Department of Transportation (CalTrans) issued a new statewide report that indicted Highway 68 between Highway 1 and Pacific Grove is at capacity during peak traffic hours. Opponents of the 270-room, 80-condominium and golf course complex planned by Pebble Beach Co. for Spanish Bay in Pebble Beach pointed to the report at the Coastal Commission as reason to deny the project.

Carmel River Management Program offered as a public service the "Carmel River Erosion Hotline" to inform property owners in Carmel Valley of the potential for erosion and flooding along Carmel River during heavy rains. The hotline was to be in operation from December to April each year.

The Carmel City Council unanimously voted Jan. 8 to file a lawsuit against Monterey County to challenge the proposed development of Spanish Bay resort in Pebble Beach. The city council hired Carmel Valley attorney Alexander ("Zan") Henson as special counsel for Carmel. Although the lawsuit was to attack the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan in general, the specific aim of the city council was to force a new review of the 270-room, 80-condominium and golf course resort planned by the Pebble Beach Co.

The first winter recreation program sponsored by the city of Carmel began.

The Carmel City Council stated that it did not want to annex the "crass commercialism" at the mouth of the Valley but agreed that the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway area should be included for possible annexation. The council saw the sphere of influence as a possible tool to protect the city from peripheral over-development rather than as a way to raise more property taxes.

Most of the Carmel City council have stated publicly their support of the plan to enter into a $685,000 joint purchase venture with the Carmel development firm of Tescher-LeVett of the Gamble Estate. The purchase was to protect the 56,000 sq. ft. property from overdevelopment.

A standing room only crowd of about 125 residents and business people invaded Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center to give the Carmel City Council a piece of their mind. The issue that dominated the discussion was the proposed $1.2 million expansion of Harrison Memorial library. Only one person spoke out in favor of closing Lincoln Street to build the annex. Another two of the most often mentioned issues were 'second kitchens' and the city-sponsored questionnaire.

The Carmel Planning Commission unanimously voted to allow the Little family to demolish the Carmel Sands Motel and Simpson's Restaurant on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue. The vote cleared a major hurdle in the Little family's two-year struggle to rebuild the motel/restaurant complex.

The bushy-tailed California grey squirrel, a familiar species to residents and visitors alike, fell prey to a scabies epidemic. The fatality rate, according to one city official, may have been as high as 90 percent.

CITY STAFFERS packed boxes of files preparing for a temporary relocation to Sunset Center while the "new" city hall on Monte Verde was undergoing a $350,000 remodeling job.

The Carmel City Council during a special meeting unanimously voted to oppose a proposed land use amendment to the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program that would have allowed bed and breakfast inns of up to six units in unincorporated areas surrounding the city.

FEBRUARY

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors designated 2,223 acres of Carmel Valley land as open space. The supervisors annexed five parcels to Bloomquist Ranch.

Carole Colter was hired and the new co-director of the Carmel Youth Center and a new board was scheduled to be seated March 20, ending a three-year internal feud at the center.

The Rev. Donald Gilbert of Oakland, a zen master, was appointed to conduct services at the Sambosa Zen Temple in mid-Carmel Valley.

The Carmel Planning Commission rejected in a 4-3 vote Clint Eastwood's proposed two-story retail and office complex on San Carlos Street.

MARCH

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver ruled that the Carmel Valley Master Plan and its accompanying environmental impact report do not meet the mandates of the California Environmental Quality Act. The ruling was based on a court challenge of the master plan by the city of Carmel and Carmel resident Virginia Mertz.

A boxed-in Carmel Unified School District Board of Education reluctantly ended the middle school seven-period day and proceeded to issue layoff notices to several teachers by March 15. The layoffs were expected to save the district approximately $75,000.

The Carmel Board of Adjustments restricted one shop owner's hours and passed a resolution that expressed concern "that a possible increase in the number of visitor-oriented business staying open during nighttime hours may have an adverse effect upon the residential character of our village."

The adjustments board requested the Carmel City Council adopt an urgency ordinance controlling any such increase.

The city council later enacted a 45-day emergency moratorium that prohibited new shops from remaining open past 6 p.m. or one half hour past the time of local sunset, whichever comes first.

Later in the month, on the advice of City Attorney Don Freeman, the city council rescinded the ordinance after Bennet Sculpture challenged it by filing a lawsuit. Freeman told the council that he did not think the court would interpert the situation

The city purchased four of the lots for $678,750 and created a non-profit corporation to sell tax exempt bonds to pay for the purchase. The city planned to sell the lots. The purchase enabled the city to reduce the potential development density of the estate.

APRIL

Oakland attorney Rodney Goya proposed that the city puchase two lots on Ninth Avenue and Dolores Streets owned by Dr. Elwood Sanders and exchange those lots to Sanders for the Swiss Cafe building next to the Harrison Memorial Library for use as an annex. The exchange would cost the city and the library board of trustees approximately $700,000.

Holiday thoughts and impressions

By JIM KOHNKE
Tularcitos School Principal

It is quite possible, particularly at this time of year, that there may not be a keen public interest in test scores, text book adoptions, teacher-pupil ratios and many other important school issues.

On this one occasion, I should like to take a holiday from the usual business of reporting, and share with you some holiday thoughts and impressions I experienced near our home in Carmel Valley.

Spring and summer were always my favorite times of year. Warmth, new life, bright colors, the richness of life. Out walking in the hills of Robles Del Rio this Sunday brought a new view of winter to my understanding. As in all things this new view was based on previous input from winters and people of my past.

Steven Taugher, a local poet, once wrote a short poem called In Praise of Rain. In that poem it is made clear that the natural elements are often needed to actually force us inside. Not only inside out of the storm, but inside ourselves, taking time to think, take stock of what we've accomplished and where we are going. On my walk I could feel those winter forces; the clear penetrating cold, the damp of the hills and the possible threat of rain. I could also feel the beautiful stillness of winter everywhere. The smell of dead leaves and wet ground and the occasional smell of wood smoke coming from a chimney, the thick heavy smell of pine from one house, and the peppery scent of live oak from another...all giving a sense of an inward silence, strength and expectation.

The winer has forced us inside. Its silent beauty is indeed powerful. Inside we are close to the fire, close to our thoughts and each other. Planning, building creating for the new spring and the new life that lives in each of us.

May this winter, and all the beautiful feasts which enrich and enoble this splendid time of year, find you and your loved ones at peace, and in joyful hope of the new year.

Ken White appointed to city planning commission

"It's had two years of input from the community. I think it's an outstanding plan," he said.

If the ice cream issue is any example, the council does not have a "yes man" on the planning commission in White.

Last summer the council created a national uproar when it rejected the proposed Carmel Creamery ice cream parlor because of its water use. The council also did not want to allow another eating establishment in town.

Through national media reporting, the council got a reputation for banning ice cream cones, a food generally thought to be as American as apple pie and hot dogs.

"I think people ought to be able to buy an ice cream cone in Carmel. I don't believe in fast food, but I don't see ice cream as a fast food," White said.

Model Mugging: A rape defense for women

Teaching how to knockout attackers within seconds

By MICHAEL GARDNER
(Second in a series)

STUDENT IN model mugging class is lifted off the floor at the beginning of an attack. In the program women are taught how to strike back and deliver knockout blows to their attacker. (Michael Gardner photo.)

SUSAN IS glad to be off work at 6 o'clock, an hour earlier than usual but business was slow so her supervisor allowed her to go home before quitting time.

Winter darkness has fallen, but Susan pays no heed. Usually she walks to her car with the gang at the office. This night she is alone. Susan fumbles for her car keys buried deep in her purse.

Suddenly she is grabbed around the chest from behind and dragged into the nearby shrubs. "I'll kill you," the man breathes heavily into her ear. He climbs on top of her and reaches to pull her top off.

In doing so, his knees push him higher off the ground and the pressure of his weight relaxes off her mid-section. With one hand ripping at her clothes, Susan sees the opening.

"No! No! No!," Susan shouts while at the same time firmly plantly one foot on the ground to quickly push herself out from underneath the man. A quick kick to the head sends him reeling back.

"You bitch, now I'm really going to get you," he screams, heading toward her on all fours.

"Eyes, Kick! Kick!" ring in Susan's ears as he reaches to grab her again. "No! No! No!" Susan shouts again as she thrusts her fingers into his eyes, smashes her palm upward against his nose and then delivers a chop kick that flattens the attacker against the ground.

Susan doesn't run because she knows he may regroup and attack her again — this time aware of her ability to fight back.

For the first time she stands. "Stomp! Stomp! Stomp!," the shouts ring again in her ears. Susan responds by kicking the man in the head several times as he rolls in pain on the grass. Soon he is motionless. Seeing that he is unconscious, only then does Susan run for help.

What seemed like a lifetime for Susan actually occurred within the space of five seconds.

For Susan the story very well could have had a different ending; one with her physically raped and emotionally traumatized for the rest of her life.

But Susan is a graduate of "Model Mugging" — a program that teaches women how to effectively fight back and actually knock out the attacker within seconds.

The program is offered locally through Aikido of Monterey with the 20-hour courses beginning again in January at Monterey Peninsula College.

MATT THOMAS, a martial arts expert now living in San Francisco, was teaching one day when one of his black belt karate students confided that she had been raped.

As local instructor Danielle Evans explained, the student felt guilty for letting the school down by being unable to defend herself. Thomas felt as if the school had let the student down.

"They taught her to look good and to have good form, but they really hadn't taught her how to defend herself," Evans said.

After researching more than 2,000 rape cases in the Los Angeles area, Thomas began to develop the prototype of what now is model mugging.

From his research Thomas knew that the vast majority of rapes are committed by a single, unarmed attacker.

But he also knew that even in today's more enlightened times women are conditioned that they are no match for men and are not to be violent. Most women cannot fight strength against strength with most men, but Thomas — from his martial arts background — knew that there are certain moves a woman can make and certain vulnerable parts of a man's body that when struck, even by a weaker woman, can cause serious injury.

But his first class ended in dismal failure. Not one woman passed the course even though they each knew the theory.

Remembering the experience of the female black belt victim, Thomas reworked the theory to include practicality — having the women attacked by a heavily-padded man, thus giving rise to the "Model Mugging" name. In addition, Thomas added a "verbal abuse" program that helps women cope with the slurs and threats of a rapist.

On their next try, each woman knocked out the "mugger" within seconds.

THOMAS' Model Mugging program has been brought to the Monterey Peninsula by Evans and Julio Toribo, another martial arts expert whose mother-in-law was assaulted on

MUGGER Dave Keip of Carmel Valley explains the "uniform" that protects him during the attacks. Model muggers wear large football-type helmets with mesh inside to protect the eyes, football padding, and special guards for the groin, shin and knee areas. The protection is needed because the women who are mugged do not hold back and deliver real knockout blows. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Check chimneys

The cold weather is definitely with us and with it usually comes a warm fire in the fireplace or woodstove.

Before winter gets too far along, the chimney should be checked. If a crust of material has built up on the sides, over a one-quarter inch thick, it should be cleaned. This material is very flammable and could ignite during normal use of the unit resulting in a dangerous chimney fire.

All woodburning units should have the chimney cleaned at least once each year. If the unit is a woodstove regularly burned with the damper closed down it should be checked at least once a month and the chimney cleaned when needed. If you hear material rattling when you first start the unit or when you turn the damper it's probably time to clean the chimney.

Fireplaces normally won't build up soot in the chimney as fast as a woodstove. However, if pitchy pine is burned regularly, soot can build up fast and the chimney should be checked at least once a month.

If a chimney fire should occur, call the fire department. The chimney fire can be knocked down or extinguished by throwing no more than eight ounces of water on the fire in the fireplace. This will generate steam which is what puts the fire out.

A Halloween Christmas?

IT MUST have seemed like Halloween last weekend at the Mission Ranch barn what with all those crazy costumed people walking around having an immensely good time.

But it was Dec. 20 and time for Lydia and Terry Moran's Seventh Annual Costume and Dancing Santa Claus Party (dancing Santa Claus?) The Morans of Carmel managed to get 150 people of all shapes and sizes to dress up for this wild and wacky yearly event.

The rules of the party were simple: all men were to come as "any kind of Santa," while the women were to dress as anything pertaining to Christmas. As you may have surmised there were some off-the-wall costumes. Who says Halloween only falls on Oct. 31?

The dancing, prancing and merriment went on well into the night by most accounts, but was that really Santa kissing mom? Was that really mom?

A CHRISTMAS PROGRAM TO REMEMBER

More than 80 members and guests of the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution enjoyed a luncheon Dec. 17 at a festively-decorated Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

PARTY HOSTS Terry and Lydia Moran, he's Sherlock Holmes (what happened to Santa?) and she's a tin soldier, as if you didn't know.

Regent Fran Gooley thanked Mrs. Gerald Chaney for arranging the luncheon, then introdced new members Teri Freedman, Mary Lou Nielson and Mary Teel Johnson, who planned the musical program for the day. Johnson worked with Suzanne Gallaher, director of the Chaoraleers musical group, to bring the group Christmas carols with American origins, with the former on piano and the latter on vocals and leading everyone in singing carols.

GALA HANUKKAH PARTY AT SHERATON

Congregation Beth Israel, not to be outdone this holiday season, presented a Gala Hanukkah Party at the Monterey Sheraton Dec. 14.

More than 130 guests attended the festive event, which, if you're unfamiliar with the Jewish holiday, is almost like a Jewish "Fourth of July," or Independence Day, and recalls the victory of Judas Maccabeus and rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem in which they threw off the yoke of oppression.

Attending the event were Kevin LaGraff, aide to State Sen. Henry Mello; State Assemblyman Sam Farr; Monterey County Supervisors Sam Karas and Dusan Petrovic; Mayors Charlotte Townsend of Careml, Clyde Roberson of Monterey, George Takahashi of Marina, and Lance McClair of Seaside; and Carmel City Councilmembers David Maradei, Robert Stevenson, and Helen Arnold.

Providing entertainment for the event were the musical group Sirocco and a bevy of belly dancers. Chairing the whole event was Carmel's Constance Laub, with her husband Carmel businessman Paul "I Love Pebble Beach" Laub as master of ceremonies.

SMITH COLLEGE CLUB HONORS PRESIDENT

The Monterey Peninsula Smith College Club honored Mary Maples Dunn, new president of Smith College in Northampton, Mass., at a luncheon Dec. 14 at Hacienda Clubhouse in Carmel.

In her informal address to more than 50 alumnae, guidance counselors and four high school students, Dunn scored the need of college students to combine the best of tradition with preparation for "the cutting edge of the future" by mastering computer technology with creative and compelling intellectual vibrance.

Observing the Smith undergraduates, she found them serious about their work and the community, with a sense of fun, wit and good humor.

Dunn, with her own special wit and humor, described the adjustment she and her husband, Richard Dunn, had to make with her new role. When she was Dean of Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania, she and her husband at the University of Pennsylvania collaborated during the week on their history publications and research, often working together through weekends. Now, she said, when they meet only on weekends, it won't be work, just enjoyment.

Questions about candidates who find Smith worthy of consideration she answered personally after the luncheon as Jane Barr, in charge of candidates, introduced area high school students Laurie Heebner, Camilla Munoz, Liza Rhody and Debbie Bodenheimer.

Among the guests were Doyle Martin, college counselor of York School, and Madeline Littlefield who has an advanced degree from the Smith College graduate school of education.

Smith has changed its class schedule to coordinate with the Five College program offered by Amherst, Hampshire College, Mt. Holyoke, University of Massachusetts and Smith, who share professors and facilities. By next year the libraries of all five neighboring colleges will be jointly computerized.

Traveling with Dunn on her whirlwind engagements for three days were executive director of the Smith College Alumnae Association, Nancy Steeper, and Louise Landreth who chaired the committee of the Smith Clubs of Northern California.

Helen Kirkpatrick Milbank chaired the luncheon and was on the Northern Smith Clubs committee. Mary Ann Lawson, president of local Smith Club, arranged for Barbara McGowan, treasurer and in charge of the poem sale for scholarships, and Mary Chanler, who had the special Julia Child (Smith graduate) recipe book created for Mary Maples Dunn's two-day inaugural celebration at the college, for sale to have their wares available at the luncheon.

Dorothy Hutchinson showed friends the news clip of her first balloon flight, in keeping with many Smith firsts. Barbara Roll, Virginia Atkinson, Mrs. Chanler, Helen Fortune and Dorothea Mumford were responsible for the delightful luncheon arrangements.

Ann and Lytle Williams chatted with Mrs. Mumford, Gayle Holmes with Ann Humphreys Hammond and Jean Thomas. California was the only official trip President Dunn will make in her first year in office.

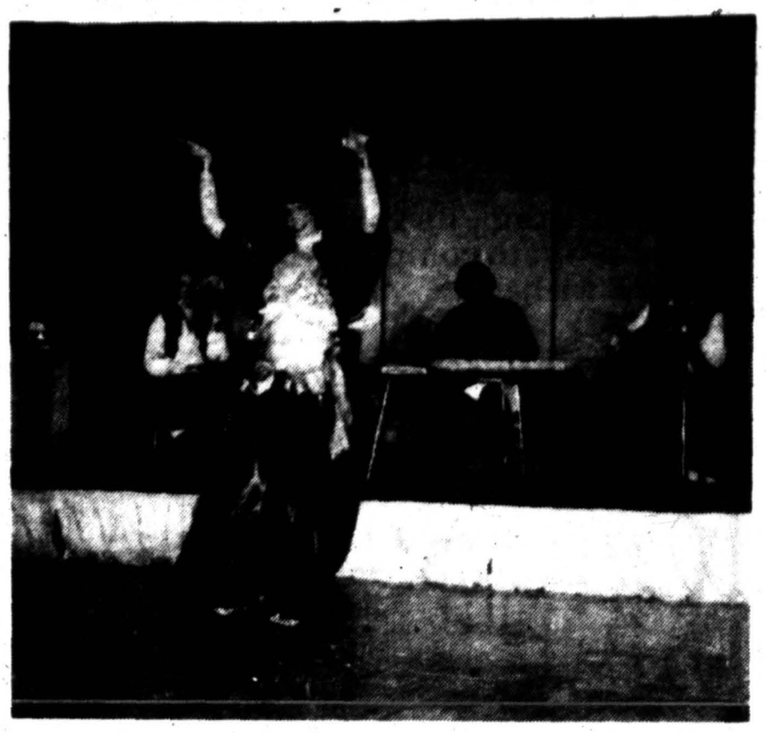
ANNE AND Lytle Williams, left, share a laugh with Dorothea Mumford, member of the Smith College luncheon committee, at Hacienda Carmel.



BELLY DANCING was one of the wide-ranging entertainment served up at the Congregation Beth Israel Hannukah celebration at Monterey Sheraton. Music was provided by the group Sirocco in background.

Seat belt law effective Jan. 1

Of all the new laws going into effect Jan. 1, 1986 that govern Californians' behavior on the highway, none has attracted more attention than the mandatory seat belt law.

The bill requires that every driver of a private passenger vehicle or light truck (less than 6001 pounds unladen) wears a safety belt when operating the vehicle. The same requirement applies to all passengers over the age of four. A first citation carries a $20 fine; the second is $50.

"The California Highway Patrol supported this legislation," said Commissioner James E. Smith. "We know, based on the experience in other states with similar laws, that seat belts save lives. If we can get seat belt usage here in California up from the present 12-15 percent to 50 or, better yet, 75 percent, we can expect to save 700 to 1000 lives a year, and prevent 32,000 injuries."

The law prohibits the CHP or any law enforcement agency from stopping a vehicle simply because the occupants are unbelted. A peace officer can only check on seat belt usage when making a stop for another violation of the state vehicle code.

The seat belt bill mandates the use of those devices which came with the vehicle as standard equipment at the time of original sale. Since federal regulations did not require seat belts in all passenger vehicles until 1968, models older than 1968 are exempt from the law. For light truck and housecars, belt requirements became effective with the 1972 model year. Furthermore, a passenger car with only four belts as original equipment can carry five passengers and still be legal, as long as all four belts are used.

There is also a provision for a medical exemption. A person with a physical or medical condition that prevents the wearing of a safety belt may request a letter of certification from a licensed physician, surgeon or chiropractor; the letter must be in the person's possession whenever traveling in a private passenger vehicle.

There is no requirement that the safety belt be the three-point or harness-type device. A lap belt alone is sufficient to satisfy the law.

An unbelted passenger over the age of 16 can be cited. If the passenger is between the ages of four and 16, the driver is cited if the passenger is not buckled up. Children under the age of four should be restrained in a federally approved child passenger safety seat, a requirement enacted by the legislature three years ago.

The vehicle's registered owner is responsible for maintaining all safety belts in good condition. The registered owner, not the driver, can be cited if the seat belts have been removed.

"We have already heard some objections from people who feel that the seat belt law infringes on their right to make an individual choice," Smith said. "But unbelted accident victims suffer more severe injuries, even if they live, and ultimately we all pay the price in higher insurance prices and higher costs for government-sponsored medical programs.

"Our strategy is to try to convince people that wearing a seat belt is a life-saving, sensible habit. But if they can't be convinced through logic, maybe the threat of a citation will be more persuasive. We have every confidence that enforcement will work smoothly, and that the law will prove effective."

DMV stops suspensions

The Department of Motor Vehicles has discontinued suspending the licenses of California drivers who failed to show proof of insurance when stopped by a peace officer.

"DMV is responding to a Dec. 5 California Supreme Court order instructing us to refrain from enforcing the provisions of the new insurance law (SB 850) pending a final decision involving the law's constitutionality," DMV Director George Meese said.

Some 80,000 California motorists have received letters pre-dating Dec. 5 telling them their driver's licenses are suspended under the new law until they present proof of insurance to DMV. These instructions should be observed. The license suspensions will remain on those drivers' computer records until the necessary insurance action is reported to DMV.

"The public should also understand," Meese added, "that the state Supreme Court's action does not apply to an older basic financial responsibility law currently in effect, requiring motorists to have liability insurance at the time they are involved in an accident.

TWENTY PERCENT OPINION

BY ROBERT - STEPHENSON
CARMEL CITY COUNCILMAN

The Beach Pathway: Phase II

If you have been in the Post Office box lobby during the past week you may have noticed the large scale plan that has been posted for public review in the glass-enclosed bulletin board. That plan is the fulfillment of many of the dreams of both past and present members of the Forestry Commission. Our former City Forester, Greg D'Ambrosio, is the man who saw the need and had the vision and patience to guide it to this point in time.

In 1976 the city council adopted the Forestry and Beach Management Plan which had as one of its primary goals the establishment of a scenic walkway along the bluff top adjacent to Scenic Road.

In 1981 the scenic walkway concept was adopted as a part of the city's Land Use Plan of the Local Coastal Program and it was certified as an appropriate coastal development policy by the California Coastal Commission.

In 1983 it was reaffirmed as a part of the future of this city when it was included in the General Plan of the city as one of the major projects the city had identified for completion.

As you can see, the concept of a pedestrian walkway along the Scenic Road bluff top has been discussed and planned by Carmel-by-the-Sea residents for many years. The incomparable beauty of the area with its windswept cypress trees, which sand beach, and sparkling blue Pacific Ocean, provides residents with a natural setting for coastal walks, ocean viewing and sunset watching.

During the winter of 1982/83, the California coastline was battered by a series of unusually severe storms which caused more than $100 million worth of damage. At Carmel-by-the-Sea, storm waves and rain water run-off resulted in extensive shoreline damage. During that winter, the stairs at Eighth Avenue, Ninth Avenue, south of Tenth Avenue, south of Twelfth Avenue and south of Martin Way, as well as the ramp north of Tenth Avenue, were all severely damaged or destroyed. The beach bluffs were extensively eroded, especially between Eighth and Eleventh avenues. This erosion resulted in the loss of 16 large Monterey Cypress trees as well as the near-undercutting of Scenic Road.

Some emergency work was performed during these storms, but more extensive repairs were clearly needed. In the spring of 1983, the city retained the services of coastal engineering geologists Rogers Johnson and Associates to design structural repairs to the Carmel shoreline (Phase I). These repairs included the installation of three- to five-ton granite boulders anchored into the bedrock which underlies the beach and the upgrading of the storm drainage system along Scenic Road. Phase I was completed in December 1983.

During Phase I, the city established the Carmel Beach Task Force composed of residents of our community and representatives from the city council, planning commission, forestry commission and city staff. The Carmel Beach Task Force reviewed plans for Phase I and outlined the scope for Phase II, which was to include the rebuilding of damaged beach access stairs and ramps and the revegetation of the eroded bluffs. The Carmel Beach Task Force also included the design of a pedestrian walkway as envisioned in the city's Beach Management Plan and Local Coastal Program.

After an extensive review and interview process, the Carmel Beach Task Force recommended, and the city council approved, the selection of Royston, Hanamoto, Alley and Abey, a landscape architectural firm from Mill Valley, to design Phase II. Their plans closely follow the recommendations developed by the Carmel Beach Task Force listed in the following Scope of Work.

1. Pedestrian Path: Create an informal pedestrian path along the top of the bluffs. The path should be separate from auto and bicycle traffic on Scenic Road.
2. Beach Access: Restore beach stairways lost during winter storm damage. Allow sufficient width for two-way pedestrian movement.
3. Landscaping: Provide landscaping to improve erosion control on the bluffs and improve the visual appearance of project structures. Drought-tolerant, native species or natural-looking plant materials should be used.
4. Facilities: Public facilities should be provided where they will enhance public use within the project area. Well-screened trash containers, viewing benches, drinking fountains and wash-off areas should be included where appropriate.

After completion of the Phase II Design Plan, Royston, Hanamoto, Alley and Abey, in conjunction with the city staff, prepared an Environmental Impact Report (EIR). This document describes the project, evaluates potential environmental impacts, and lists possible solutions to address these impacts. Both the Phase II Plan and the Draft EIR will be available for review by the public during a six-week period extending from Thursday, Dec. 12, 1985 through Friday, Jan. 13, 1986.

It is ironic that the first comment that I received on the display in the Post Office lobby came from a gentleman who continually complains that the city council is recklessly spending the public monies. I want to assure the residents of this community that this project is a well-planned project. We have phased the budgeting over a three-year period with $351,000 identified for FY-1985, $200,000 for FY-1986 and the balance for FY-1987. In order to assure restoration of the beach to excellent condition the city council raised the hostelry tax to 10 percent.

It costs money to construct a project of this magnitude. We are redesigning one of the major areas of this community and we are fulfilling an identified project of the General Plan. The residents of this community expressed a desire to have such a walkway. The city staff and the city council intend to see that we get it.

Greg D'Ambrosio, Brian Roseth, Gary Kelley and David Shonman are the members of the city staff who assisted the Beach Task Force in achieving this design. They must be recognized as dedicated public employees. The city is proud to have their talents, intelligence, and good humor supporting us.

The members of the Beach Task Force are: Kaye Scott, Scott Hall, Ginnie Atkinson, Mike Stanton, Brad Johnson, Greg Linder and Jean Grace. Phases I and II required many meetings over the past two years. They are the kind of involved citizens that we can point to with pride. I cannot praise them enough. They care about the future of this community and they have contributed to make this a better place.

ROUNDUP

Safe partying tips

December is traditionally a month with many social functions involving the consumption of alcohol and subsequent travel "home from the party." It is also a month in which California traffic enforcement agencies conduct increased campaigns to keep intoxicated drivers off the road. This year will be no exception.

"One hundred eighty five persons died and an additional 5,992 were injured in alcohol-involved traffic accidents on California roadways last December. Those collisions certainly put a damper on the holiday season for thousands of families. California traffic safety groups will be doing everything they can to prevent similar collisions this year," O'Rourke said.

When asked what individuals can do to reduce the possibility of being involved in a collision or being arrested for driving while intoxicated, he gave the following advice:

- Have someone in your group agree to be responsible for driving. That person would agree not to consume any alcoholic beverages during the party. At the next party, someone else would agree to be the "designated driver."
- Plan ahead for parties you intend to give. Serve plenty of non-alcoholic drinks and unsalted foods.
- Restrict consumption of alcoholic beverages to no more than one an hour.
- Make arrangements to stay overnight at the party location if you intend to drink, and do not drive until effects of the alcohol have worn off.
- Take a taxi home if you've been drinking and can't stay overnight where you are.
- Have a friend or relative pick you up at a predetermined time.

The theme for Drunk and Drugged Driving Week this year is "Because We Care." Although many state and local governments, as well as private organizations, are planning drinking driving prevention programs, the real meaning for this theme is for the individual.

BEFORE THE attacks begin, the women encircle the "muggers" and yell as a pyschological tool of model mugging. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Psycho mugging is scary necessity for women

her front porch.

Twenty stabs later she was dead.

The program, offered for 20 hours over a four-week period, is taught by trained instructors who attend special courses in Mountain View.

Instructors "ideally" have a background in self-defense, Evans said. And they also must have teaching and leadership ability.

Muggers, too, undergo specialized training and they must have a martial arts background.

Evans stresses that the program is not just another theory class.

"It's not just a course that appeals to the intellect. We change the conditional response to an attack with the knockout blow. Women usually freeze and flail. We change that response," she said.

After an initial introduction and simulated attacks demonstrating successful defenses, the women are actually attacked by one of the muggers.

The mugger is dressed in a special suit. His head is protected by a football helmet with extra padding and mesh to protect the eyes when the woman gouges him. A face is painted on the mask that makes the mugger look like "jason" straight out of the movie Friday the 13th.

The mugger also wears special football padding to protect vulnerable spots such as the groin, shins and ankles.

With all the gear on, a relatively small mugger like David Kiep at about 5-11, 170, looks like former Chicago Bear middle linebacker Dick Butkus.

Each mugging is carried out in different scenarios, such as in the bedroom or walking along the street.

One of the scariest and most realistic muggings occurs during the "pyscho" scenario, which also is the most graphic in terms of language.

The verbal abuse is an important part of the program because many times rapists will demoralize a woman by calling her names and threatening her life and the lives of her loved ones.

The mugger silently slips into the room as the victim sleeps. He immediately jumps on top of her and begins to act out certain characters. Sometimes the mugger is someone on drugs oblivious to most pain.

Another time the role is that of a very unstable person:

"I'm sorry. I've got to do this. He told me I have to. I don't want to. He said I have to do it or I'm not a man. I'm sorry," the mugger says as he leans over the victim.

The woman, trying to buy time and find an opening, gently says, "What do you want? Please don't hurt me."

Suddenly, he changes personality and becomes aggressive. "Shaddup bitch...You're a whore and you want it."

He begins to slap her, but the class has taught her well because the blows are deflected by the stronger elbows being moved in front of the face to absorb the hitting.

The verbal abuse is an important part of the program because many times rapists will demoralize a woman by calling her names and threatening her life and the lives of her loved ones.

As mugger Keip says, "If, God forbid, the woman is attacked she is prepared for every part of the attack. She is not frightened by the nasty things he may say to her."

ONCE THE woman begins to fight back, the other participants lining the wall begin to shout: "Kick, kick, eyes, nose, kick."

Women who have taken Model Mugging in other areas of the state and were attacked have reported "hearing" the voices of their peers as they fought back.

The man overpowers her again. The participants shout "breathe...breathe." The most important thing for a woman to remember when being attacked is to remain calm. Deep breathing helps to keep calm and await an opening.

The woman pauses and relaxes. His tension eases and she quickly sees the opening. Two quick kicks to the groin, a gouge in the eyes, and a chop kick to the head later, the mugger places his hands over his eyes to indicate a knockout.

The victim stands and stomps her feet three times near his head and shouts "No! No! No!" (A woman should knock out the man rather than run immediately because he may get up and attack her again, the class teaches.)

Less than a minute has elapsed from the second escape attempt to the knockout.

Many of the muggings are videotaped and afterward the class watches the film to see what went right and what went wrong.

In addition to the physical teachings, Model Mugging helps women cope with the emotional trauma of rape through group discussions. Some of the women in the class

Smoking and cancer

Cigarette smoking, even more than sexual promiscuity, can cause cervical cancer, says a Utah professor of medicine.

"Over the past eight years several studies have raised the possibility that cigarette smoking is an independent risk factor for cervical cancer and is associated with a substantially higher risk than seen in women with multiple sexual partners," writes Dr. Joseph L. Lyon, chief of the University of Utah's Division of Epidemiology.

Recommendations for how often women should take Pap smear tests have been based on the assumption that cervical cancer is a sexually transmitted disease, Lyon says. However, he reports, the new studies show the need for careful surveillance of women smokers regardless of their sexual exposures.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"Aging is not a punishment, it's a reward," said retired film star Alice Faye, as she received the key to the city of Doylestown, Pennsylvania, at age 69. The popular actress of the 1930s and 40s stated that "getting older doesn't have to be dreary," provided that people pay attention to their health and maintain a positive outlook.

More and more older Americans are seeking jobs. That's the word from state officials charged with carrying out the job training provisions of the Older Americans Act. Officials attribute the increase in older job-seekers to the fact that some pensions haven't kept up with inflation and to a desire, especially among early retirees, to remain active in the work force.

Remember When? 1942—Can you recall the names of that year's most popular songs? The big hit was Irving Berlin's "White Christmas." Others included "I Left My Heart At The Stage Door Canteen," "The White Cliffs Of Dover," "Be Careful, It's My Heart," "Sleepy Lagoon," "Blues In The Night," and "Praise The Lord And Pass The Ammunition."

WELCOME TO OUR CITY

Carmelenos will learn with pleasure that the War Department has designated the Monterey Peninsula as one of several reserve officers training camps, to be maintained for six weeks during next summer.

It is expected that the camp will open about June 15, and it will be for cavalry instruction.

The last time there was a training camp at the Presidio, several of the families of the men resided here, not only during the camp, but for weeks before and after; and in two instances real estate was acquired here.

PINE PITH, PITCH AND BARK

Unemployment decreased, but not nearly enough, during the year now breathing its last. From about 11,000,000 12 months ago, the army of dispossessed's ranks have thinned to around 9,000,000. Unemployment will remain throughout 1936 and perhaps always thereafter as one of the greatest problems in our national life. Machines are rapidly replacing men. The coming you will see the job of caring for the idle begin to shift back to local communities. Politics in this must go. Work must go on. Work must be created for the able-bodied, and the unfit must be fed.

CITY'S COMPUTER FINALLY BROKEN IN

The city's new computer has finally been broken in.

According to Finance Officer Ralph Cowen, city hall employees spent a frustrating three months with the $31,000 system, but things are beginning to run smoothly now.

Cowen says the problems came as no surprise to anyone. Although the machine arrived this spring, it had to be programmed and adapted to Carmel's rather unique municipal set-up.

Tofu-based cuisine gaining Western acceptance

ped with 85-pound weights to press out the excess liquid.

The cooking, solidifying, pressing processes take approximately two and one-half hours. The Pattons keep multiple batches working in succession to produce between 300 and 500 pounds of preservative-free tofu daily.

"Now all I have to do is cool it off then pack it," Leslie explained, unburdening a 35-block of tofu from its mold into a tub-sized sink of clear water.

Peninsula restaurants purchase Jack and the Beanstalk Tofu in bulk. For distribution to markets, Leslie seals the soybean cakes in their water-packed cartons.

"The only time I get to sit down is when I do the book work," Leslie noted. Tofu production concludes between noon and 1 p.m. Buck then loads his van with ice chests, each filled with 80 cartons of fresh tofu. Afternoons he devotes to deliveries.

This Carmel Valley company delivers to most of the local chain stores, health food stores, specialty markets and Oriental restaurants, Buck said.

A major share of their deliveries, he added, go to small markets around the peninsula that cater to Asian families. To the peninsula's Asian communities, tofu is not a sometime cooking ingredient but a staple.

"Tofu can be used in so many dishes. It doesn't have to be just 'wok'ed or stir-fried," Buck pointed out. "I first encountered tofu in college 10 years ago. You can use it in lasagna, enchiladas..."

"I like tofu pumpkin pie," Leslie interjected. "That's really good."

The Pattons sometimes give tofu cooking demonstrations to try to break down any tofu-wariness habored by non-Asians.

Nutritionally — tofu has a lot going for it. A four-ounce serving contains only 99 calories, 10 grams of protein, six grams of fat and no cholesterol. The same serving of cheddar cheese contains 28 grams of protein and a whopping 451 calories, according to The Tofu Cookbook.

The Pattons' tofu retails for approximately $1.19 per one-pound carton, and other tofu brands are also economically priced. A time-honored quality of tofu is its adaptability. It can be diced into a salad, whipped in a blender for low-calorie sauces and dressings, skewered with other shish-kebab amendments and roasted. Tofu even works its way into a low-calorie cheesecake.

Tofu — itself mildly flavored — readily takes on the flavors of the foods it's prepared with.

"There's no automation here," Buck quipped.

"We can't get sick around here," Leslie said, lifting tofu cakes from their chilling bath. She also said "they have no time" to start a family.

All three workers wear thick rubber boots to protect against the hot and cold water that drips during the different stages of tofu-making.

Buck must squeegee the floor regularly to keep puddles from turning into pools.

"You have to be mentally alert all the time," he said loudly above the sound of pressure cooker and liquid extractor. "There's a lot going on here. We're maximized and fully efficient with three workers. Being a small business period is difficult, but it's nice to be your own boss."

Following is a recipe from the collection of the Jack and Beanstalk company of Carmel Valley.

TOFU CHEESECAKE

1 9-inch graham cracker crust
2 lb. tofu
¼ cup vegetable oil
½ cup honey
2 Tbsp. vanilla
3 Tbsp. lemon juice
2 tsp. cornstarch or arrowroot
2 tsp. cinnamon
2 Tbsp. peanut butter
1 tsp. salt
1 egg

Blend all ingredients until smooth in an electric mixer. Fill crust and bake for 25 to 30 minutes until slightly browned and firm. Remove from oven.

TOFU CHEESECAKE TOPPING

1 Tbsp. sugar or honey
1 small can cherry pie filling
¾ cup sour cream

Mix sour cream and sugar. Pour over baked cake. Spoon fruit mixture onto sour ceam and swirl. Bake again for seven minutes. Cool finished product and refrigerate.

ONE BATCH follows the other as Leslie Patton pours soymilk into cheesecloth-lined, tofu molds. The Pattons have operated Jack and the Beanstalk tofu for nearly three years. (Photographs by Holly McFarland.)

Spalding Invitational Pro-Am to begin Jan. 2

Winners of 11 1985 PGA Tour titles are among the latest entrants in the $200,000 Spalding Invitational Pro-Am which will kick off the new golf year Thursday through Sunday, Jan. 2-5 at the Del Monte, Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club and Pebble Beach golf courses.

Headed by U.S. Open champion Andy North and two-time Tour winner Roger Maltbie, enjoying his finest season, the 10 newest entrants in the 14th annual Spalding include two rookies who will be making their debuts in the tournament.

They are Mark Wiebe, winner of the Anheuser-Busch, and Ken Green, the Buick Open champion. Maltbie, who finished eighth on the 1985 money list with earnings in excess of $360,000, won both the Westchester and World Series titles this year.

Also in the field is 1980 Spalding winner John Mahaffey, the former PGA champion who won this year's Texas Open title and finished ninth on the money list with $341,600.

Joining them in this year's field will be Bank of Boston winner George Burns, Pensacola champ Danny Edwards, Southern Open winner Tim Simpson, Byron Nelson champ Bob Eastwood and Quad Cities title holder Dan Forsman.

Other former Spalding winners already in the field are Al Geiberger, Johnny Miller, defending champ Peter Oosterhuis, Bobby Clampett, Mark Pfeil and David Glenz.

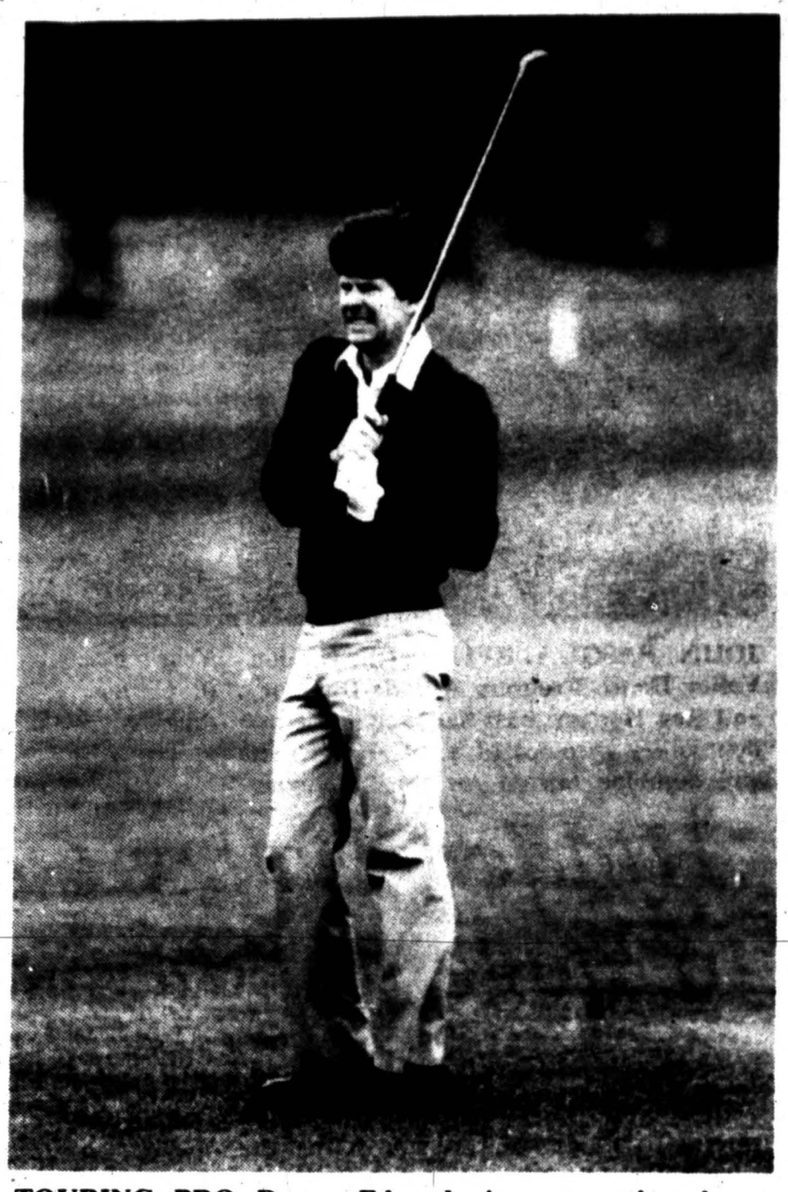
Representing the LPGA Tour in the only tournament in creation featuring men and women playing head to head for equal prize money will be: Alice Miller, Jan Stephenson, Patty Sheehan, Val Skinner, Juli Inkster, Jane Blalock, Sally Little, Muffin Spencer-Devlin and Beth Daniel.

Daniel, Spencer-Devlin and Skinner will be making their Spalding debuts. Little will be returning for the first time since 1978, when the Spalding made golf history by inviting women to play in its field.

"I like the women's chances," said Tournament Director Harold Firstman. "Last year Kathy Whitworth was tied for the lead going into the final round at Pebble Beach where she slipped a little, but still finished sixth, the finest finish by a woman in the tournament. My reason for increasing the size of the women's field to nine, as opposed to five last year, is that I feel in the larger number we can do away with a great deal of the intimidation factor they have experienced in the past. I believe in the old philosophy of security in numbers."

Advance season tickets to the Spalding are priced at $20 for all four days. Purchased individually the tickets would cost $50. Tickets may be obtained by calling the Spalding office at 484-2151, or by writing: Spalding Pro-Am, P.O. Box M, Carmel, 93921.

The Kiwanis Club of Monterey will again be the tournament beneficiary, using proceeds for its youth-oriented charity programs.



TOURING PRO Danny Edwards is among the players scheduled to compete in the Spalding Invitational Pro-Am, which opens Jan. 2.

Hidden Valley ensemble to stage holiday hoedown

A COMPLEMENT OF Hidden Valley talents have assembled a musical tribute to American cities as part of the 10th annual New Year's Eve gala at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley.

"Paint the Town!" is the theme of the gala, a benefit for the Hidden Valley scholarship fund that includes a buffet dinner and live dance music. Multiple regions of the United States will be visited in song and dance starting 9 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 31 at Hidden Valley Theatre.

"All six of us are going to be high-stepping and kicking in tuxedos and slinky gowns," exclaimed Reg Huston, director of vocal programs at the Carmel Valley-based institute for the arts.

Huston will be joined by two veteran professionals of Hidden Valley operas and musicals, Larry Venza, baritone; and Kevin Skiles, tenor. The song and dance routines will also feature newcomers to the Hidden Valley coterie, sopranos Jacqueline Dickey and Laurel Rice and mezzo soprano Marcia Gronewold.

Show tunes for "Paint the Town" have been arranged by Stephen Tosh, who also serves as music director. John Pasqualetti, Hidden Valley's Dance Program Artistic Director, is choreographer.

A musical combo will back the revue, a tribute to American towns and cities that will include performances of Chicago, Meet Me in St. Louis, San Francisco (Open Your Golden Gate), Blues in the Night, and two versions of New York, New York.

According to Huston, who is organizing the gala, the second half of the revue will conclude with "a surprise song. The nice thing about New Year's Eve out here is it has the feeling of a party at a home rather than in a big city."

Party-goers will also dance to the music of Stephen Tosh and his jazz combo. Tosh performs on keyboard; Brigham Cooley on string bass and Richard Conklin on drums.

The "Paint the Town!" theme will be carried out in party decorations designed by Lynda Thornton. A supper buffet will include a selection of meats, cheeses, rolls, relishes and desserts.

The fund-raiser is sponsored by Friends of Hidden Valley. Admission is $60 per person, of which $30 is tax-deductible.

Hidden Valley Theatre is off Carmel Valley Road near Ford Road, 11 miles east of Highway 1 in Carmel Valley.

For the convenience of Carmel residents, a van will be provided to pick up partiers at the mouth of Carmel Valley. They will be returned there at the conclusion of the gala at 1 a.m.

For New Year's Eve gala reservations, call Hidden Valley Theatre, 659-3115.

ROUNDUP

Watercolor master class offered

James Soares is now taking applications for the third session of the master class in watercolor painting. The classes, designed for intermediate to advanced painters, will meet 9 a.m. to noon Fridays for eight weeks.

The new session begins Jan. 3 at Sunset Center in Carmel. For details, call 373-2361.

Safety belts do their job

Some people don't use safety belts because they think they'll be trapped in a burning car or submerged in water. Truth is 99.5 percent of accidents don't involve fire or water ... except in the movies. A safety belt keeps riders in their seat, away from the dashboard and windshield.

For more safety information, contact the Monterey County Health Department at 757-1061, ext. 336.

Nutrition and the holidays discussed

Abraham Kryger, M.D., will lead a free seminar that will spotlight nutrition and the holidays, including the effects of alcohol and sugar.

The program will be presented noon to 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 28 at the Thunderbird Bookstore in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel.

A question-and-answer period will follow the seminar. For more information, call 624-4663.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

In modern times silence grows rare

BACKGROUND MUSIC is so pervasive now that silence has become threatening. In this holiday season, it adds to the festive feeling to have the old carols sounding — for most of us, for some of the time.

Music lovers cope with this canned music in a variety of ways, from indifference to indignation. Most probably don't like it, but accept it as inevitable.

This phenomenon is fairly recent, within the last generation or so. Before that, one bought one's groceries and chicken feed in silence.

Psychologists tell us that chickens lay more eggs and cows give more milk when gentle music is played for them. Plants respond to music and grow better when there are not too many exposed dissonances, the decibel level is moderate, and the percussion light.

It was a short step from there to determine that workers work better, shoppers shop better, etc., if there is music in the background.

The power of music has been known, of course, for centuries. It has accompanied men into battle, used both to give courage and to terrify. Although the Scots did not invent the bagpipe, they seem to have enlarged it for the purpose of riveting their enemies with fear. Modern warfare has rendered both types of battle music unnecessary. (Somehow, this doesn't seem to be an advance.)

Kings and other exalted personages have found trumpets and percussion effective for alerting the commoners that they were coming. This habit continues with our Army, Navy and Marine bands.

Devotional music had a way of getting out of hand. Quite a few papal pronouncements inform the musicians of what they can or, mostly, cannot do. Some of Martin Luther's reforms had to do with the music and encouraging more congregational involvement. Other reformers took a different view and abolished music in worship altogether, as being too distracting.

Rhythmic work songs have been used by laborers to promote cooperation as well as giving impetus to movement.

This by no means exhaustive list is meant to be restricted to events in which music is an accompaniment and not, as in dance, a co-equal.

But for riding in elevators? For shopping? For going to the doctor?

Surely I am not alone in having been friven from a store by incessantly loud music that is not, to put it mildly, to my taste. I find it something of an anomaly to shop for nice wine with hard rock or country music in the air. But, imagine, if you will, the expression on the clerk's face when I suggested chamber music might be more suitable.

I do not claim uniqueness for finding piped music in offices so distracting that even mindless clerical duties are impaired.

My recent dentists seem to share my tastes, at least in music, but that also has its problems. One gets involved in an intricate passage just as the drill comes down and blots it out.

Obviously, the simplest solution is just to request the attendant to turn down the music (it usually cannot be turned off). The one time I got courageous enough to try it, the clerk was surprised but cooperative.

Whatever became of silence? Perhaps it is time to resuscitate John Cage's most famous composition: 4'33". Most of you will know that it is four and a half minutes of silence for piano. Cage was not being facetitious; he wanted to teach us to hear the everyday sounds that surround us.

Nor am I being totally facetitious. Musicians and music teachers can lodge serious complaints about the constant presence of music: it may teach us not to listen. Many people learn to blot out the background music, but that is not necessarily helpful. How can they be sure that the next time they attend a concert, their earlids won't snap shut at the first chord?

Silence has always been important in music, composers as diverse as Haydn and Webern making witty and expressive use of it. We really don't want to lose it.

Cinderella

Staged in the manner of the pantomimes presented each holiday season in England, a musical Cinderella plays at the Wharf Theater.

Barney Hulse directs the musical, to be staged at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Monday, Dec. 27, 28 and 30, and at 8 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 29. Admission is $6 and $8.

Volunteer training to begin for SPCA adoption counselors

The Monterey County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MCSPCA) will hold a volunteer training workshop for prospective adoption counselors on Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 18 and 19 from 10 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. at the MCSPCA's education center, 1002 Highway 68 (across from the Laguna Seca Raceway).

Volunteers will learn pet care and owner responsibility, animal control laws, pet personality testing and techniques for working with the public.

The volunteer adoption counselors will be instrumental in the new adoption procedures to be implemented in 1986. Adoption counselors will interview prospective adoptors and assist them in selecting a compatible pet for their family and home.

Each year the MCSPCA receives more than 12,000 unwanted pets from Monterey County and adopts approximately 3,000 to new homes. With the help of the new adoption counselors, the MCSPCA expects to increase the 25 percent adoption rate.

To join the class, call 373-2631 or 422-4721.

Guess who's coming to dinner?

Fleas. Lots of fleas. They're eating your pet alive. You know your pets have fleas when they itch and scratch. But, did you know, with fleas they may also have tapeworms, be anemic, susceptible to skin infection and allergic reactions? Worst of all, they can't tell you.

Discourage this unwanted guest. Routine use of medicated powders, sprays and shampoos will help, but you must defleа both your pet and your home...or the fleas will keep coming back. If your dog shows an allergic reaction—small bumps or scabs, redness, or dandruff-like scales—contact your veterinarian.

No dog deserves to play host to a greedy and ungrateful dinner guest.

The Monterey County SPCA has more information on how you can protect your pets. Call us.

School groups visit aquarium free

The Monterey Bay Aquarium has announced its 1986 education programs will be free of charge for all prearranged school groups.

Some 80,000 school children took advantage of the aquarium's Discovery Labs, auditorium programs and guided and unguided tours in 1985. That number may reach 100,000 for 1986, representing a savings of nearly $300,000 for the school groups that would otherwise have to pay.

"Our primary mission is public education," Director of Education Steve Webster pointed out, "so we want to make it as easy as possible for classes to come."

Another education program that allows the classrooms to be open to local school's biology classes once a week will also be free, and other new opportunities for school children and their classes are in the planning stages.

"We're expanding our summer programs to double what they were last year," Webster adds. "We're starting an outreach program, organizing new teacher workshops, and preparing a variety of interpretive publications, videos and cassettes for use by schools."

The decision to provide all education programs free of charge will be reviewed yearly, and will remain in effect provided the non-profit privately funded aquarium meets its operating costs through admission receipts and other revenue sources.

"We're grateful for all the community support," Dr. Webster said. "And the aquarium certainly represents a wonderful learning resource." Suspending program fees is one major way the Monterey Bay Aquarium has demonstrated its commitment to public education.

School groups who wish to book a class visit may make reservations by dialing 649-3133.

AT&T offers ticket choices

A variety of ticket packages are available for the inaugural AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, formerly the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

The $650,000 tournament will be played Jan. 27 through Feb. 2 at Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill golf courses.

A roster of celebrities is expected to turn out for the tournament, among them Clint Eastwood, George C. Scott, Jack Lemmon, James Garner and Glen Campbell.

Adding a "Crosby touch" to the AT&T are Nathaniel Crosby, who will be playing as a professional, and his brother Harry, playing as an amateur.

The winning pro will receive $108,000 in prize money. Another $50,000 will go to the top professional finishers in the pro-am. Six low-scoring amateurs will be awarded Waterford crystal.

A sidelight to the regular tournament will be the "Shoot-Out at Pebble Beach" Jan. 28, sponsored by 3M.

This year six touring professionals will be invited to play five holes at Pebble Beach — the first, second, third, 17th and 18th. One player is eliminated after each hole until there is a winner at the 18th. Last year's "Shoot-Out" champion was Lee Trevino.

Among the ticket packages available for advance purchase are:

• The grounds and grandstand badge is $80. In addition to season badge privileges, this badge entitles the holder to a grandstand seat at the 18th green at Pebble Beach. Grandstand seats are limited and will be allocated strictly on receipt of application.

• A season badge is $50 prior to Dec. 31. After Dec. 31 it is $60. It provides entrance to the grounds and seven full days of practice and tournament rounds at all three courses.

• An any-day ticket book may be purchased prior to Dec. 31 for $140, a savings of $40 over daily ticket purchases. There are 12 coupons in a book and each one is exchanged at the entrance gates for a daily ticket, admitting the holder to any one practice or tournament day.

• Teenagers 13 through 19 can purchase a teen ticket for $10, which is good Monday through Sunday of the tournament. Children 12 and under are admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

For additional ticket order information, call 372-4711.

Tribute by son included in Weston celebration

Cole Weston will lead a one-day photographic workshop and will present a lecture about his father, Edward Weston, in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of the celebrated lensman.

Both programs are sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Photographic Workshops, organized by Monterey Peninsula College.

The one-day workshop will start with a walking expedition of Point Lobos. During the walk Weston will point out the locations of his father's famous photographs, of his "simple" technique and the visual aspects of the photographs. Lunch will be served at Weston Beach. The afternoon will conclude at Cole's studio where vintage and rare Edward Weston prints will be shown.

The celebration continues at 7 p.m. when Cole will present a talk entitled, "Edward Weston — The Man not Myth." The talk covers his life and times, his work and his philosophy.

This workshop is designed for the photographer, historian and anyone interested in creative people.

"In the Tripod Holes of Edward Weston," by Cole Weston, will be offered 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. March 23 and includes lunch and talk. Fee is $55.

"Edward Weston — The Man not Myth," a talk by Cole Weston, is offered 7 to 9 p.m. March 23 in LF 103 at Monterey Peninsula College campus. Fee is $7.50.

For further information contact Monterey Peninsula Photographic Workshops, Monterey Peninsula College, 980 Fremont Blvd., Monterey 93940. Or call Roger Fremier or Gail Pierce at 624-6870.

Don't kid around with life.

Kids do the cutest things with kittens and puppies.

They also do some very ugly things. Particularly when the child is too young to understand how much innocent play may frighten or injure an animal.

That's why parents should wait until their child is old enough before bringing pets into the home.

When the time comes, the Monterey County SPCA is an intelligent place to choose the right type, age and size of pet for your family. The Monterey County SPCA has dogs, cats and other pets of virtually every breed, all screened for health and temperament.

We only charge you a small fee. But we ask you to invest some serious thought.

REAL ESTATE
FROM CARMEL VALLEY TO CARMEL BAY

The walking town . . .

A friend of ours who lives on Carmel Point is fond of saying, "More people walk by my house than drive by." Many people in Carmel can say that. It's a walking town. People stop and chat. They see things — flowers, a new gate, fresh paint. They're in no hurry, because one of the best things we have here is time.

The way to learn about Carmel is to walk it. Not just your own neighborhood, but the unfamiliar streets, ways and lanes. Drive, if you must, to a different area; then park and strike out for a few blocks of intimate sightseeing. You'll find things you never knew were there!

A riot of begonias near the end of Monte Verde. A second story grapestake fence on Ocean View. A garage atop a house on upper San Carlos, and another on San Mateo Avenue, and still another on Pescadero.

Some day we're going to count the turrets in Carmel . . . and the adobes. There's a burro lives in front of an adobe on Atherton Road near Rio. The Little House on Lobos Street lives up to its name. And the highest house in Carmel, we think, is Casa de Juniper on San Pedro Lane. Odd how it hugs the ground.

In our business we spend a lot of time learning the town. So if you want a quaint cottage in Carmel Woods . . . or a beach house on the ocean . . . or two acres and a manor not 10 minutes walk from downtown, we know where they are. And they really are available from time to time. For instance — but no, that one is taken.

Put in your order early. We're expecting the new Spring line any day now. Call 624-1838.
